STORYMAKERS SUMMER INTERNSHIP

Are you a younger scholar or community member interested in history? We have an opportunity to learn research skills, prepare for advanced study, and bring research back to Indigenous communities.

Apply to the StoryMakers Summer Internship to:

- Learn archival research techniques
- Contribute to community-engaged research projects
- Conduct collaborative and independent research
- Work with mentors who are experts in Native American and Indigenous Studies
- Learn from community knowledge holders

ABOUT

StoryMakers is part of the Indigenous America 250 research initiative, a project with the National Park Service, Interior Region 1. It is a community-engaged, collaborative effort to expand our understanding of the Revolutionary War through tribally-centered and site-specific studies. Interns will spend four weeks in residence in Philadelphia and two weeks collaborating remotely.
